Debut novel from hotly-tipped new thriller writer.

Striking cover with enticing testimonial from a leading author in genre.

Proactive author promotion including in-stores and book festivals, well-reviewed, Book of the Month (The Crack magazine), promoted by New Writing North throughout their Read Regional 2009 campaign.

The shop is everything to him – always neat and tidy, safe and reliable, the rental DVDs carefully categorised, alphabetised and memorised. He thinks he knows his customers, until the bloodstains begin to appear – on grubby banknotes, on porn DVDs, and on the shop's fresh new carpet.

Then the girl comes into his life, green eyes and fresh scarlet slashed beneath her thin cotton blouse. He wants to rescue and protect her. He wants to be with her. Forever.

Murky and disturbing, 9987 is a jagged, tragic crime story set in a disturbing, uncaring world where only three things are constant: fantasy, loneliness and love.

"Gripping, cinematic, voyeuristic. A delightfully disturbing debut." – Caroline Smailes (Black Boxes, In Search of Adam)
